SECOND REPORT

OF

THE COMMISSIONERS OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION,

IRELAND.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR MAJESTY,

WE the Commissioners appointed under Your Majesty's Commission, bearing date the 15th day of August, in the fifth year of Your Majesty's reign, whose names are hereunto subscribed, beg leave humbly to submit to Your Majesty this our Second Report, comprising the results of our Inquiry respecting the Schools now existing in Ireland. We were directed to ascertain "the state of each Parish, with reference to the means of Education, the number and description of Schools, the kind of Instruction afforded therein, the average Attendance at each, and the Sources from which they are supported; and to state generally, whether the numbers attending the same for the last five years have been increasing, stationary, or diminishing." In obedience to these directions, we have diligently investigated these several matters, and the result of such our investigations we now humbly submit to Your Majesty, set forth in the special Reports of the visiting Commissioners, and arranged in the same successive order as in the First Part. This our Inquiry respecting Schools in Ireland was conducted concurrently with that of which the results are exhibited in our First Report; and the mode in which it was conducted has been therein already described. We will, however, beg leave to repeat that portion of our previous statement, in which we represented that, "as, from time to time, each Benefice became ready to be visited, one or more of the Commissioners, furnished with all the Returns which had been received with regard to such Benefice, repaired to the spot, and held an Inquiry in respect thereof, into the several matters directed by the Commission," that "in all cases the Commissioners, besides directing previous public notice to be given of the time and place of holding the Inquiry, sent a special notice thereof to the several clergy of the parish, to the enumerator, to the schoolmasters, and others whose personal attendance was requisite," and that "the Commissioners held their local investigation publicly, ascertaining on the evidence of the parties attending before them the several matters of fact comprised within the terms of the Commission."

It will appear that this part of our Inquiry is, like the preceding, of a statistical nature. We did not consider that it fell within the scope of our Inquiry to investigate the character or competence of the teachers, their manner of imparting what they professed to teach, the treatment of the children, and their general proficiency, and such other minute inquiries as would alone enable us to pronounce an opinion upon the comparative effectiveness of each school, and the manner in which it is administered. The due execution of such an Inquiry into each of the 9,657 schools on which we have reported would have occupied many years; and it was an Inquiry into which (having received no special directions) we did not deem ourselves justified, by the terms of the Commission, to enter. Under such circumstances, we humbly deem, that we shall be acting most strictly in conformity with the directions of the Commission, if we abstain from offering any opinion upon the general character and administration of Schools, or of particular classes of Schools, in Ireland. Neither has it lain within the prescribed scope of our Inquiry to investigate the character of the various Associations, having for their object the promotion of Education. Such inquiries have been already made by the Commissioners of Education in Ireland, and the result is given in their several Reports.

With respect to the particulars into which we have been instructed to inquire, and which are exhibited in detail in the following special Reports, we have attempted to show some of the condensed results in the Summaries which we here subjoin.

* This total is obtained by the same method as that followed in each Diocese, and presents a more correct result than could be shown by the addition of the several totals.

We have thus exhibited for each Diocese and Province, and, finally, for the whole of Ireland, the number of daily schools, the number of children on the books of those schools, distinguishing, when it was possible, the number of each sex, and have adjoined the population for 1834, as stated in our First Report, in order that it may appear to what proportion the means of education are afforded. In applying this proportion it must be borne in mind that probably about a seventh part of the whole population (or 14 per centum) are of the age of from seven to thirteen inclusive, and that this may therefore be assumed to be the utmost number for the education of whom provision is required; and that the number possessing the means of education (as collected from the entries in the books of the daily schools) must be deemed ample or deficient with reference to this proportion. But we must here observe, that adequacy or inadequacy in the extent of education cannot safely be inferred from a comparison of population with numbers on the books in the case of any single parish, or even union of parishes, inasmuch as schools situated near the boundary of a parish may possibly be attended in a large proportion by children from an adjoining parish; and thus, in the case of two parishes so situated, and of which the inhabitants are equally well provided with facilities for education, a comparison of the kind above mentioned would exhibit the erroneous appearances of excess in one case and deficiency in the other. It is therefore only to large portions of territory, such as are comprised within the limits of a diocese, that such comparison can be safely applied, and any inference drawn from it which may not happen to be wholly fallacious. We must also beg leave to observe, that in some schools no books were kept, and the number of children was not reported. Our Summaries consequently will not exhibit the whole actual number of children having the means of daily instruction, but those only whose names are on the books of 8,886 daily schools out of 9,657 existing in Ireland. We have, however, endeavoured to show the probable number thus unavoidably omitted, taking as the basis of our calculation the average number in those schools in which lists had been produced. While the enumeration of children on the books of the daily schools shows the number who have the means of instruction, and occasionally attend, the statement of the average daily attendance at each school will tend to show the proportion of those by whom instruction is actually received. We have not, however, attempted to show the aggregate or total of these statements of average attendance, because such statements are records, not of an authenticated fact, but only of the opinion of the parties giving evidence before the Commissioners, and also because the averages themselves vary greatly in summer and in winter, between which periods we could not take a mean with any certainty that it might not be delusive and remote from the truth. Such statements of average attendance are nevertheless useful when compared in each particular instance with the numbers on the books, in order to afford a better means of judging of the real effectiveness of the school.

It will be found in some instances that the average attendance stated exceeds the numbers on the books; a circumstance bearing at first the appearance of error, but which may be attributed to the average having been taken for the whole year, while the names on the books show only the diminished number who attend during the winter months, during which period the Commissioners severally held their Inquiries.

We have not shown, either in the total for each Benefice, in our Special Reports, or in the preceding Summaries, the number of children on the books of the Sunday Schools. We abstained from so doing because, since the same children frequently attend both the Sunday and Week-day Schools, many would have been repeated in the enumeration, and erroneous inferences would have been the consequent result. We here beg leave to observe, that it must not be inferred that there are no Sunday Schools in any of those parishes wherein none have been reported. The practice of some of the visiting Commissioners has been to omit such schools, partly in consequence of a doubt on their part whether they fell strictly within the scope of our Inquiry, partly in consequence of the indistinct character of many of them, and the difficulty of deciding which of them were entitled to be so denominated. On these accounts the Sunday Schools, though accurately reported in some Dioceses, have not been enumerated in the preceding Summaries.

We have distinguished the number of Schools reported to receive no other support than payments from the children, from those which wholly or in part receive assistance and support from endowment or subscription.

Of Schools supported wholly by payments from the children, amounting in number to 5,653, a small proportion, as will appear from our Special Reports, afford the means of classical education, and are not designed for the children of the poorer classes; but the great majority, among which are many called "Hedge Schools," are intended for the education of the poor. The instruction professedly afforded in them is usually confined to reading, writing, and arithmetic; and the payments from each child vary from 6*d.* to 7*s.* a quarter.

We have shown the number of Schools which receive assistance from, or are in connexion respectively with, the "National Board," the "Association for Discountenancing Vice," "Erasmus Smith's Fund," the "Kildare-street Society," and the "London Hibernian Society;" in which latter the "London Ladies' Hibernian Society" is included.

Among these are enumerated Schools which have been reported to be "in connexion with" some one of the foregoing societies, but which do not, nevertheless, appear to receive from such society any pecuniary aid. It appears to be the present practice of the Kildare-street Society to give assistance, not in money, but in grants of books and other school requisites. Some Schools are found to be in connexion with, or supported by more than one society; and, accordingly, the numbers stated in the Summaries, of Schools in connexion with or supported by various societies respectively, are not exclusive each of the other; but the same School, if supported by two societies, is enumerated alike under the head of each. We have included in our Summaries only the foregoing Board and societies, because they are those which have, in connexion with them, the greatest number of Schools, and of which the operations are least confined to any particular part of Ireland. There are, however, others which we have not therein mentioned; either because the Schools assisted by them are comparatively few, or their operations confined to a particular district. Such are, the Incorporated Society for Promoting English Protestant Schools in Ireland, established by charter in 1733 (once having in connexion with it numerous Schools, but now very few, and no longer receiving support from the State), the Ardagh Diocesan Society, the Irish Society, the Baptist Society, the Anabaptist Society, the Wesleyan Methodist Society, and Robinson's Benefaction.

It appears that there are many Benefices in which there is no evidence of the existence of such Parochial School as was provided to be kept under the Acts 28 Henry VIII. and 7 William III. We must at the same time state that the Parochial Schools have by no means a distinct character; many which are so called being in connexion with various societies, and the correctness of the designation being frequently uncertain. Wherever the incumbent is found to contribute pecuniary aid in support of a School, to the amount of not less than £2 per annum, it may be presumed that such School is a Parochial School, under the meaning of the above-mentioned Acts; but this is by no means sufficiently certain to enable us to enumerate such Schools with the requisite accuracy in our Summaries.

We cannot refrain from adverting with satisfaction to the numerous instances of contributions from individuals in support of Schools, of which evidence is afforded in our Special Reports.

It is our less gratifying duty to advert to the result of a comparison of the number of daily Schools with the total population in the several Dioceses in Ireland; from whence it appears, that while in the Diocese of Down there is one School to 594 persons, in the Diocese of Ardfert and Aghadoe there is only one School to 1,342 persons; and in the Dioceses of Emly, Limerick, Killalla, and Clonfert, the proportion is scarcely more favourable. It also appears, on a comparison of the number of children on the books of the daily Schools, and the computed number not reported, with the total population in the several Dioceses, that there is considerable diversity (a diversity which we deplore) in the extent to which, in various parts of Ireland, the benefits of daily instruction are received; and that compared with the number having the means of instruction in the Dioceses of Leighlin, Kilmore, Down, and Ardagh, the proportion in the Dioceses of Emly, Limerick, Ardfert and Aghadoe, and Killalla, appears to be deficient.

We must also advert to the Table appended to our Special Reports, showing the population for 1834, (as given in our first Report,) of each parish in Ireland, in which, as appears from this our Second Report, there is no School. From this Table it will appear that there are 449 such parishes, containing, in 1834, an aggregate population of 342,198 persons; and that, although many of these parishes are small, there are among them 122, containing each a population of not less than 1000.

In conclusion, we, the Commissioners of Public Instruction, Ireland, whose names are hereunto subscribed, beg leave humbly to submit to your Majesty, together with an Appendix to our First Report, this our Second Report, containing the results of our Inquiry respecting the Schools now existing in Ireland.

‡‡ The school has been allowed to diminish. Four or five years ago there were 20 children. It was designed for teaching the linen manufactory; but this trade leaving the neighbourhood, and the funds being found insufficient, the system has long been confined to general useful education. It is in contemplation to make this school a daily school for males and females.

‡ The children are all resident within the school.

§ Dependent on the other schools on the same foundation. The principal cause of the diminution in the boys' school is the accumulation in the female schools, in consequence of the difficulty found in getting the females out as apprentices. The charter number is 150.

‖ The school decreased considerably about Easter, 1834, at which time there were 39 scholars on the roll.

¶ Owing, it was thought, to increased poverty in the parents.
